

THE PEACOCK AT ROWSLEY

The Hotel and our facilities

Few Country House Hotels match up to the pedigree of The Peacock at Rowsley. It dates from 1652 and was originally built as a Manor House by John Stevenson. For a short period it was the Dower house to nearby Haddon Hall, the seat of the Duke of Rutland and home of The Manners family. The hotel left the Manners family in 1957 and was purchased back in 2003 bringing it back into the Haddon Estate, by Lord Edward Manners who refurbished the entire hotel. It is furnished with antiques and set in beautiful gardens leading down to the banks of the River Derwent, where you might enjoy a spot of trout fishing. Our 15 bedrooms are all en suite (some with a shower only), all have flat screen smart L TV's, hairdryer, telephone, hospitality tray, and ironing board on request and complimentary WIFI

Dining Room

The main dining room has antiques mouse man table and chairs, serves delicious food in pleasant surroundings overlooking the garden as do the other two dining rooms, and can booked for private dining from 4 to 20 persons.

The Peacock Bar is a great place to relax and unwind with a log fire during autumn and winter. The bar menu offers a good selection of light snacks to a three course lunch, or dinner for those who prefer a more informal atmosphere.

The Conference Rooms

The two delightful conference rooms offer stunning views over the garden which leads down to the River Derwent.

- The Derwent Room

This is the smaller of the two conference rooms, 17ft x 16ft and can accommodate up to 12 delegates for a board meeting. The room has windows on two sides and can be blacked out for projecting. It also has 8 electrical sockets.

- The Wye Room

Our largest conference room, 25ft x 15ft, which can accommodate 16 delegates for a board meeting. Windows are on the longest wall and can be blacked out for projection. It also has 12 electrical sockets.

Our two conference packages meet the usual conference needs but we are always happy to cater for the individual conference.
